Challenges for large collections reaching out to small collections
Gabriela M. Hogue, North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences

Large collection reaches out to small collection

- Offering help with databasing and/or general curation, or for inclusion in grant proposal

  - Staff (usually single staff member) accepts; everyone benefits
    - Staff member retires
      - Administration decides to donate collection
      - Collection is cared for by new staff member

  - Staff and/or administration ask “Can you take it?”
    - Large collection accepts it

What happens when we run out of space?