You are strongly advised to take public transportation when visiting the UC Berkeley campus. It is a short walk to campus from the Downtown Berkeley BART station, and several AC Transit buses serve the campus. If you do choose to drive, allow yourself at least 20 minutes to park and walk to campus and be prepared to pay up to $20/day. Carry coins and/or small bills if parking in campus lots. Be aware that no free parking exists at any time directly on the UC Berkeley campus (including Handicapped spots). Also remember that parking restrictions can vary due to special events, construction, et cetera.

STREET PARKING

Residential permit parking zones in Berkeley do not apply on weekends and are designated on the map with speckling (see page two). One can park for free along the north and south sides of campus in residential areas on both Saturday and Sunday. However, read signs carefully because other parking restrictions do apply! Once parked, allow yourself 10-15 minutes to walk several blocks to the VLSB.

On Saturdays, street parking in the downtown business district is metered from 9:00 AM to 6:00 PM, but on Sundays metered parking is free all day for most of the streets shown on the map on page two. Again, read signs carefully!
